

How does an intervention developed and tested by researchers make its way to the front-line of health care?

This is the topic of a new blog by Dr Natalia Lewis, a Research Fellow at Centre for Academic Primary Care in the University of Bristol.

Natalia is part of the research team investigating the impact of IRIS (Identification and Referral to Improve Safety), a general-practice-based Domestic Violence and Abuse (DVA) training, support and referral programme.

After the trial: how a programme to improve the health care response to domestic violence and abuse fares in the real-world NHS