

A new report from healthcare think tank the King's Fund sets out progress in delivering the Getting It Right First Time (GIRFT) programme deliver improvements in quality and reductions in the cost of orthopaedic care in England.

Tackling variations in clinical care
Assessing the Getting It Right First Time (GIRFT) programme gives an overview of the programme, how clinicians have responded and what it has already highlighted in terms of variations of care across the NHS.

TheKingsFund > Ideas that change health care

Tackling variations in clinical care

Assessing the Getting It Right First Time (GIRFT) programme

Author
Nicholas Timmins

June 2017

The CLAHRC is carrying out an evaluation of the planned changes to orthopaedics, to identify lessons to inform future efforts to improve the organisation and delivery of services.