

Professor Kamaldeep Bhui is Professor of Cultural Psychiatry & Epidemiology at Queen Mary University of London and an Honorary Consultant Psychiatrist in East London Foundation Trust. He is an psychoanalytic psychotherapist. He is Editor of the British Journal of Psychiatry and the International Journal of Culture and Mental Health. Professor Bhui trained at University College London and at Guys and St Thomas' qualifying in 1988. He proceeded to train in London, completing his higher psychiatric training by 1992, secured a Wellcome Training Fellowship to progress research and secured a first consultant appointment in 1999 followed by a Senior Lecturer and Professorial post at Queen Mary University of London in 2000 & 2003 respectively. His research and practice interests on health include social exclusion, work characteristics, cultural psychiatry, epidemiology, health services research and psychological therapies. He has undertaken original research with communities to understand this complex process called radicalisation and provides evidence on how it works and who is vulnerable.

Professor Bhui heads the Centre for Psychiatry at Barts & the London Medical School. He is also the Director of the Cultural Consultation Service (Culturalconsultation.org), Director of the QMUL MSc Programme, the co-founder of Careif (www.careif.org), an international mental health charity based in London that promotes work for young people and their health through culture, sport and arts and, more recently, the Director of the Synergi Collaborative Centre, a new initiative to transform ethnic inequalities in mental health services, (synergicollaborativecentre.co.uk).

In 2016 he received a CBE (Commander of the British Empire) in the Queen's New Years' Honours List for services to mental health care and research.
