

The votes are cast and the results are in - the winners of the inaugural London wide Brian Turley Patient and Carer Involvement Awards have been selected!

The Awards were created in memory of Brian Turley (pictured below) , a dedicated and committed patient advocate and disability rights campaigner who worked closely with our colleagues at NIHR CLAHRC North West London. The awards aim to sustain Brian's values and commitment to partnerships between professionals and patients, carers and the public in research and service improvement work across the Capital.

All candidates have been informed of the results.

Winners will be officially announced on April 26th at the NIHR CLAHRC NWL Spring Learning Event at the Congress Centre in Central London.

We look forward to the presentation of the Awards by Simon Denegri, National Director for Patients and Public in Health Research.

Our thanks to researchers, NHS and Public Health staff and of course patients, carers and users of services who took the time to put together nominations and entries,

We also recognise the work of judges from each CLAHRC who took the time to consider each award carefully, and provide detailed and constructive feedback for entrants.
